PRACTICE 01 · 어휘 추론 (25439-0042)

Action takes place by choosing which ends shall be satisfied by the employment of means. Time is scarce for man only because whichever ends he chooses to satisfy, there are others that must remain unsatisfied. When we must use a means so that some ends remain unsatisfied, the necessity for a choice among ends arises. For example, Jones is engaged in watching a baseball game on television. He is faced with the choice of spending the next hour in: (a) continuing to watch the baseball game, (b) playing bridge, or (c) going for a drive. He would like to do all three of these things, but his means (time) is insufficient. As a result, he must choose: one end can be satisfied, but the others must go unfulfilled. Suppose that he decides on course A. This is a clear indication that he has ranked the satisfaction of end A higher than the satisfaction of ends B or C.

PRACTICE 02 · 어휘 추론 (25439-0043)

Environmental stresses cause changes in the genetic makeup of a population by favoring certain gene variants more than others. This is, in fact, the normal way that populations can adapt rapidly to changes in their environment without mutations being required to produce new adaptations. It is also the reason why populations with genetic diversity are more likely to survive in the face of change. However, there is another side of this phenomenon related to human impacts on populations. Toxins added to the environment create selection pressure for individuals that are more tolerant of the toxins. One negative impact of this is that it can reduce the genetic diversity of a population. Another problem occurs if the organism is a pest and the toxin is contained in, for example, a pesticide. As a result of the selection pressure, the population seems to develop tolerance to the toxin. The pesticide then becomes less effective.

PRACTICE 03 · (A)·(B)·(C) 문맥에 맞는 낱말 (25439-0044)

People's happiness depends not on their absolute wealth, but rather on their wealth relative to those around them. In one experiment, two capuchin monkeys were initially perfectly content with a reward of cucumbers when they successfully performed a task. But when one monkey was later given tastier grapes as a reward, the monkey receiving plain old cucumbers became enraged, angrily throwing the previously satisfactory salad vegetable at its handler. The monkeys' economy had grown, since grapes are better than cucumbers. But the resulting inequality brought only discontent. Humans are the same. When employees at the University of California were given information about the salaries of their peers, those discovering they were paid below the average suddenly became less satisfied and more likely to seek a new job. The attitudes of those earning above the average were happily unaffected.

PRACTICE 01 · 빈칸에 들어갈 말 (25439-0050)

Our complex brains might have evolved to establish strong social bonds, but defining what should be part of that social group appears to be rather flexible. For instance, some people treat their pets as if they are members of their family, and believe they can relate to the pets' needs, desires, fears and dreams. Others see animals as distinct from humans and wouldn't think of talking to one as if it was a friend. Many people keep the ashes of a deceased loved one nearby, believing those ashes continue to serve as some link to their existence. Even if inanimate objects don't have a distinct personality, many of us still attribute certain human characteristics to non-human objects or beings, such as pets, dolls or even cars and memorabilia.

PRACTICE 02 · 빈칸에 들어갈 말 (25439-0051)

Although the wish to be alone is often strong, its intensity varies from person to person. An equally impelling impulse, though, is to seek the company of others and to spend extended periods of time sharing activities. In these periods we exchange information and feelings in both conversational and non-verbal forms (facial expressions, eye contact, gestures, touching, and so on). We need other people to provide us with love, support, approval, bodily contact, reassurance, physical help and a myriad of other practical, physical and emotional needs. In a very basic sense we need others to confirm that we are there, that we exist and that we have an identity that is unique and separate from anyone else. Thus, we generally cannot exist for too long without seeking companionship.

PRACTICE 03 · 빈칸에 들어갈 말 (25439-0052)

At one end of the spectrum of transformations was the forest gardening as practiced by the peoples of New Guinea and Amazonia that mimicked natural growth and left minimal traces on the land. At the other end was monoculture: cultivating only one species of plant or raising only one species of animal. The beginnings of monoculture can be seen in the wheat fields of the Middle East, the rice paddies of China, and the herds of sheep and goats on the Eurasian steppe. Biologically speaking, these species suddenly became very successful, measured by their rates of survival and reproduction. So did other, unwanted species. Crops that ripened or were stored after harvesting attracted rats, mice, sparrows, and roaches. Water pools provided habitats for mosquitoes. Garbage and human or animal waste attracted flies. Thanks to humans, weeds and pests were also biological winners.

PRACTICE 01 · 빈칸에 들어갈 말 (25439-0054)

The reason pessimists often sound smart is that they can avoid being 'wrong' by moving the goalposts. When a doomer predicts that the world will end in five years, and it doesn't, they just shift the date. The American biologist Paul R. Ehrlich — author of the 1968 book The Population Bomb — has been doing this for decades. In 1970 he said that 'sometime in the next 15 years, the end will come. And by "the end" I mean an utter breakdown of the capacity of the planet to support humanity.' Of course, that was terribly wrong. He had another go: he said that 'England will not exist in the year 2000.' Wrong again. Ehrlich will keep pushing this deadline back. A pessimistic stance is a safe one.

We all understand differently — this much is obvious. The reason we understand differently is that our memories are different. Our experiences simply are not yours. In order to understand anything, we must find the closest item in memory to which it relates. Schank and Abelson claimed that understanding required one to find the correct knowledge structure, and to use that structure to create expectations for what events were likely to take place, so that new events could be understood in terms of what was normal. Thus, when a story about a cocktail party was being told, an understander brought out his cocktail party script which told him about what ordinarily happens at cocktail parties, and he used that script to guide his understanding of the story he was about to hear.

Of all the colours of the rainbow the one that makes the greatest impact on the eye is red. There is something instantly arresting about the colour of fire and danger. It is charged with alarm and urgency. We have red fire engines, red warning lights and the Red Cross. If we want something to be seen from a distance, such as a post box or (formerly) a telephone kiosk, we paint it red. Perhaps it is because red is so obvious that few wild animals are truly red: even the so-called Red Squirrel and the Red Deer are really shades of reddish-brown that conceal rather than advertise. Relatively few butterflies are red either. In Britain, and indeed, in all mainland Europe, only one species has a pattern of full-on bright red, like a splash of blood: the Red Admiral.

PRACTICE 01 · 빈칸에 들어갈 말 (25439-0058)

Sometimes traditions may change or appear to end because of convenience or changes in taste. For example, to make a pumpkin pie, a cook used to have to first find a pumpkin of suitable size, cut it, peel it, cook it, and mash it, all before combining it with other ingredients and pouring the mixture into a crust. Now, cooks may choose to use canned pumpkin from the supermarket and cut out a great deal of labor and time. Another changing food tradition is that many families no longer make refried beans by cooking them in lard and choose instead to use vegetable shortening. Perhaps this change came about because the family has come to prefer the taste of beans without lard, because concepts of healthy cooking have changed, or because someone in the family has heart disease or high cholesterol.

PRACTICE 02 · 빈칸에 들어갈 말 (25439-0059)

Forecasters who predict resource depletion often ignore or underestimate the power of markets. For example, some forecasters use a current reserve index to estimate how long a resource would last. The current reserve index divides the current known reserve of a resource by the amount currently used each period. So, if we know of 445 billion barrels of oil, and we are currently using 15 billion barrels per year, the index indicates that we will run out of oil in about 30 years. Some studies, like the Limits to Growth, further assume that demand will increase each year, thus depleting resources even faster. But what they fail to see is that if markets are allowed to do their usual duty, that is, prices rise as depletion occurs, resources will last much longer.

Project leaders should not be surprised when disagreements emerge within the team. In fact, they should expect them. If they remain hidden, the leader may even want to seek them out for at least two reasons. First, different views can bring with them good ideas about the project and how it might be run. Although snap decisions about project changes should be avoided, leaders should be open to new and better ways to run the project. Second, when conflicting viewpoints are found, they are more easily resolved earlier rather than later in the project. Although team members may disagree about one or another aspect of the project, most simply want their ideas considered and resolved. The team tends to look to the project leader to play the lead role in resolving differences, and members will generally defer to the leader if they believe their views have been given due consideration.

Personal branding is not something that you have to do behind the scenes. For many it does not always feel comfortable to deliberately plan how we are going to promote ourselves and our accomplishments to others. Personal branding, however, is essential to achieving success. The key takeaway from this concept is awareness and anticipation. If you are not aware of the opportunities to brand yourself, you may not be directed to leave a favorable impression. If you cannot anticipate the opportunities that will present themselves to favorably demonstrate your brand through capability, you may not be prepared when they occur. So as you begin to think about what you want to be known for, begin to be more aware of what you want people to say about you when you are not in the room as an effective way to guide your personal brand.

The ability to detect visual movement played an interesting role in the history of astronomy. In 1930, Clyde Tombaugh was searching the skies for a possible undiscovered planet beyond Neptune. He photographed each region of the sky twice, several days apart. Stars essentially remain unmoving in photos, while a planet moves from one photo to the next. However, how would he find a small dot that moved among all the countless unmoving dots in the sky? He put each pair of photos on a machine that would flip back and forth between one photo and the other. When he came to one pair of photos, he immediately noticed one dot moving as the machine flipped back and forth. He identified that dot as Pluto, which astronomers now list as a dwarf planet.

The ability to detect visual movement played an interesting role in the history of astronomy. In 1930, Clyde Tombaugh was searching the skies for a possible undiscovered planet beyond Neptune. He photographed each region of the sky twice, several days apart. Stars essentially remain moving in photos, while a planet moves from one photo to the next. ... He put each pair of photos on a machine that would flip back and forth between one photo and the other. When he came to one pair of photos, he immediately ignored one dot moving as the machine flipped back and forth. He identified that dot as Pluto, which astronomers now list as a dwarf planet.

People are cutting down forests much faster than the rate at which forests can regrow. We need to dramatically reduce our use of wood, not just because the supply is decreasing, and not just because entire species of flora and fauna that live in forests are vanishing, but because the forest performs an important function. Forests control global warming by absorbing carbon from the atmosphere and reducing greenhouse gases. They also provide oxygen for us to breathe. There are too many trivial and shortsighted uses of wood. When a hurricane advances on a city, people board up their windows with plywood. After the storm has passed, they discard the plywood. It's ironic to think that for purposes such as these, forests are cut down which otherwise would aid in controlling such storms.

PRACTICE 01 · 요약문 완성 (25439-0078)

Emotional differences exist across ages, and there are ideal emotional paradigms for a given age (i.e., some emotions are reasonable at a given age), and these paradigms are realized and solidified with the help of normative group behaviors. For example, loudness, rudeness, and outbursts are associated with loss of self-control, and these emotions are often expressed among children. In childhood, crying is criticized but forgiven because it is consistent with the child's emotional profile, whereas in youth, crying is considered childish behavior. As individuals mature intellectually and increase self-control and social sensitivity, they gradually form emotions such as melancholy, sadness, etc. This shows the fact that some emotions can only be experienced at a certain age, and virtues such as integrity and wisdom are associated with certain stages of life (e.g., adulthood).

PRACTICE 02 · 요약문 완성 (25439-0079)

The discovery that identities change the way we seek information raises interesting questions. For example, there is ample evidence that people try to make themselves look good in many situations. In contrast, researchers also found that people seek out negative information about themselves if it supports a negative identity. How is it that a person wants to make herself look good, while at the same time she wants to make herself look bad? Some researchers proposed that people try to obtain information that is consistent with their identities, whether they think of themselves positively or negatively. That is, people seek information that seems to them to be true, even if that information is negative about themselves. In contrast, positive information makes people feel good, whether it is consistent with their identity or not. Emotionally, people want to look as good as possible.

PRACTICE 03 · 요약문 완성 (25439-0080)

One common misunderstanding of evolution is that it leads inexorably to organisms that are ever better designed. But Darwinian evolution is not a process of perfection. In contrast to the Lamarckian and Great Chain of Being theories of evolution, natural selection does not inexorably drive species up some kind of ladder of perfection. Rather, natural selection is, to borrow a term from economics, a process that leads to satisficing (just being "good enough for now"). In other words, so long as you survive and do better than your rivals, that is good enough. An antelope does not have to become the fastest animal on earth; it simply has to be faster than the lions that try to catch it. By the same token, lions and other predators do not have to be able to run marathons at top speed; nor do they have to be able to catch every prey animal. They just have to be fast enough to catch sufficient prey animals to survive.

| 1  | ①  | 수단(시간)의 희소성 때문에 목적들 사이에서 선택하고 순위를 매겨야 한다는 것이 글의 핵심 주제이다.                                  |
| 2  | ①  | 선택과 희소성, 그리고 목적의 순위 매기기라는 글 전체 내용을 포괄하는 제목이다.                                             |
| 3  | ①  | 수단이 제한되어 있어 하나의 목적을 선택하면 그 선택이 선호도를 드러낸다는 것이 요지이다.                                        |
| 4  | ①  | 바로 앞에서 A 안을 선택했다고 했으므로, 이는 A 를 B, C 보다 높게 평가했다는 의미로 이어진다.                                 |
| 5  | ①  | "This"는 앞 문장에서 언급된 그의 결정(A 안 선택) 자체를 가리킨다.                                                |
| 6  | ③  | 그는 세 가지를 모두 하고 싶지만 시간(수단)이 "부족(insufficient)"해야 하므로, "sufficient(충분한)"는 반대 의미라 문맥상 부적절하다. |
| 7  | ④  | "would like" 뒤에는 to 부정사가 와야 하므로 "doing"이 아니라 "to do"가 되어야 한다.                             |
| 8  | ②  | 글에서 그는 course A(처음에 언급된 (a) 계속 야구 시청)를 선택했다고 나오며, 운전을 선택했다는 언급은 없다.                       |
| 9  | ③  | "많은 사람들이 여가시간에 야구를 즐긴다"는 문장은 선택과 희소성에 관한 글의 논리적 흐름과 무관한 삽입 문장이다.                          |
| 10 | ①  | 경쟁하는(competing) 목적들 중 하나를 선택하는 행위는 그 사람의 우선순위(priorities)를 드러낸다는 내용으로 요약된다.               |

논술형 1 정답: is abundant for → is scarce for / is sufficient. → is insufficient.

문맥상 시간은 "부족(scarce / insufficient)"해야 하므로, "is abundant for"와 "is sufficient"는 반의어로 고쳐야 한다.

논술형 2 정답: ranked

본문 마지막 문장 "he has ranked the satisfaction of end A higher than..."에서 그대로 가져온 단어이다.

| 1  | ①  | 독성물질이 내성 있는 개체를 선택적으로 살아남게 하여 유전적 다양성을 감소시킨다는 것이 핵심 주제이다.                         |
| 2  | ①  | 독성물질로 인한 선택압이 개체군을 변화시킨다는 내용을 포괄하는 제목이다.                                          |
| 3  | ①  | 독성물질로 인한 선택압이 유전적 다양성을 줄이고 살충제 효과를 약화시킨다는 것이 요지이다.                                |
| 4  | ①  | 선택압의 결과로 해당 개체군이 독성물질에 내성을 갖게 된다는 내용이 이어진다.                                       |
| 5  | ①  | this 는 앞 문장에서 설명한, 독성물질이 내성 개체를 선호하는 선택압을 만드는 과정을 가리킨다.                           |
| 6  | ③  | 독성물질에 대한 선택압은 내성 개체를 선호하므로 유전적 다양성을 "감소(reduce)"시켜야 하며, "increase"는 반대 의미라 부적절하다. |
| 7  | ②  | "more likely survive"는 "more likely to survive"가 되어야 한다.                          |
| 8  | ①  | 유전적 다양성은 생존 가능성을 "높인다"고 했으므로, "낮춘다"는 진술은 본문과 일치하지 않는다.                            |
| 9  | ②  | "농부들이 작물을 돌려짓는다"는 문장은 독성물질과 선택압에 관한 흐름과 무관하다.                                     |

|    |   |                                                                  |
|----|---|------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 10 | ㉠ | 독성물질에 내성 있는(tolerant) 개체가 선택되어 유전적 다양성이 감소(reduce)한다는 내용으로 요약된다. |
|----|---|------------------------------------------------------------------|

논술형 1 정답: (A) favoring tolerant individuals (B) reducing genetic diversity

독성물질에 대한 선택압은 내성이 강한 개체를 우선적으로 살아남게 하여(favoring tolerant individuals) 개체군 내 유전적 다양성을 감소시킨다(reducing genetic diversity).

논술형 2 정답: tolerance

본문 "the population seems to develop tolerance to the toxin"에서 정답을 찾을 수 있다.

| 1  | ㉠  | 행복은 절대적 부보다 상대적 부에 좌우된다는 것이 글의 핵심 주제이다.                                      |
| 2  | ㉠  | 원숭이와 직원들의 사례를 통해 행복이 상대적임을 보여주는 제목이다.                                        |
| 3  | ㉠  | 사람들은 절대적 상황이 아니라 타인과의 비교를 통해 행복을 판단한다는 것이 요지이다.                              |
| 4  | ㉠  | 평균보다 적게 받는다는 사실을 안 직원들은 불만족해져 새 직장을 찾을 가능성이 높아졌다는 내용이다.                      |
| 5  | ㉠  | 한 원숭이는 포도를, 다른 원숭이는 여전히 오이를 받으면서 생긴 불평등을 가리킨다.                               |
| 6  | ㉡  | 평균보다 많이 받는 직원들의 태도는 영향을 받지 "않았다(unaaffected)"고 해야 자연스러우므로 "affected"는 부적절하다. |
| 7  | ㉡  | "happy unaaffected"는 부사가 와야 하므로 "happily unaaffected"가 되어야 한다.               |
| 8  | ㉢  | 평균보다 적게 받는다는 것을 안 직원들은 "덜" 만족하게 되었다고 했으므로 "더" 만족했다는 진술은 사실과 다르다.             |
| 9  | ㉢  | "카푸친 원숭이는 도구를 사용하도록 훈련될 수 있다"는 문장은 상대적 행복에 관한 글의 흐름과 무관하다.                   |
| 10 | ㉠  | 만족감은 절대적(absolute) 상황보다 상대적(relative) 비교에 좌우된다는 내용으로 요약된다.                   |

논술형 1 정답: People's sense of well-being is shaped by their relative wealth, so people become dissatisfied when they fall behind others.

본문은 행복이 절대적 부가 아니라 상대적 부에 좌우되며, 비교에서 밀리면 불만족하게 된다는 내용이므로 [A]에서 'their relative wealth', [B]에서 'become dissatisfied when they fall behind others'를 선택해 연결하는 것이 적절하다.

논술형 2 정답: enraged

본문에 "became enraged"라고 명시되어 있으므로 정답은 enraged 이다.

| 6  | ① | 동물을 친구처럼 대하지 않는 사람들은 동물을 인간과 "다르게(distinct)" 본다는 의미가 되어야 하므로 "identical"은 부적절하다. |
| 7  | ③ | "think of" 뒤에는 동명사가 와야 하므로 "talk"이 아니라 "talking"이 되어야 한다.                        |
| 8  | ② | 본문에는 동물을 인간과 다르게 보는 사람들도 있다고 나오므로 "모두가 동의한다"는 사실과 다르다.                           |

복잡한 두뇌는 강한(strong) 사회적 유대를 형성하기 위해 진화했고, 그 사회적 집단의 범위는 유동적(flexible)이라는 내용이 되어야 자연스럽다.

논술형 2 정답: link
